Five Things to Do in New York's Art Scene June 12-16

From live music to film screenings to Old Masters returning home, these are NYC's hottest art happenings that don't require an invite.

By Dan Duray • 06/12/23

Welcome to Things to Do, our weekly roundup of happenings in the ever-buzzing New York art scene. Here, we present an expertly curated list of the best goings on that don't require an invite—but might require that you reserve a spot in advance. Be sure to check StubHub, SeatGeek and Craigslist for ticketed events that may have sold out. People in the art world are often double-booked and love secondary markets.

Thursday June 15th

Opening: “a signal urgent but breaking”

Phoebe Little. ‘Like Salt on a Snail,’ 2023. Oil on linen. 121.9 x 152.4 cm. Courtesy of the artist and Perrotin.

Perrotin gallery, 130 Orchard Street, 6-8 p.m.

If you’ve skipped Art Basel this week—and if you’re reading this feature, odds are good that you have—you can still get a preview of the next big names in art at Perrotin’s show of the Yale MFA Painting and Printmaking Class of 2023. These artists are sure to go on to great things, and the show’s press release, written by one of the program’s co-teachers, promises a strong unifying theme: “Emerging into a post-pandemic cultural landscape, the cohort reminds us of the profound lessons learned since 2020: to dig deep roots and hold as precious our immediate worlds; to value the exploration and expression of self, extracted from conventional routines and institutional systems; and to recognize the vital need to care intensely about those who navigate these precarious times with us.”
