German artist Vivian Greven has unveiled When the Sun Hits the Moon, her inaugural solo exhibition at Perrotin New York.

Displaying at the gallery is a new series of large-scale oil and acrylic paintings in Greven's signature style where Greco-Roman statues are rendered in a celestial, almost-digital-like appeal through the use of ethereal color gradients. The traditional impression that classical sculptures present is transcended in her alluring art style.

The artworks convey a sense of yearning, capturing and depicting moments of intimacy. In her paintings, Greven also explores the relationship between the bodies and minds of human beings,

Preview some of the exhibited artworks above. Vivian Greven's When the Sun Hits the Moon solo exhibition is now on view until May 23 at Perrotin's New York branch.
